I will be extremely, really, really grateful if you can approve this text right away. My publisher informs me that they need to incorporate the new parts I have written now, or they will be obliged, at significant cost, to delay their production run. You can email me, of course, and call me at [redacted]

Thank you very much for your prompt help.

Sincerely,

Glenn Carle

Dear Glenn:

If any additional text for your manuscript (including "professional crises") meets any of the submission criteria below, please submit the text for our review.

By way of background, pursuant to Agency regulation and a signed secrecy or nondisclosure agreement, a former employee or contractor is required to submit any written, oral, electronic, or other material intended for publication that mentions CIA, intelligence data or activities, or material on any subject about which you had access to classified information in the course of your employment or other contact with the Agency (before it is communicated to, or shared with, others).

The PRB Staff is available to give a quick review of a manuscript and provide advice as to whether a full review is warranted.

The Board appreciates your cooperation with prepublication review. The PRB may be contacted at [redacted] if you have any questions or if we can be of further (b)(3) CIAAct assistance.

Please include [redacted] on all messages in order to ensure appropriate and timely action is taken.

I need to speak to you soonest. My publisher has asked me to add some text to my book, The Interrogator. I have written the text; it is not long, perhaps 1,000 words?, and [redacted] It discusses personal and professional crises I had. I mention no names, locations, or operations. I just say "I made this mistake. The consequences for me were... My family experienced the following illnesses [redacted] But, I want to run it by you. (b)(6)

The publishers need me to do this right away. Can we speak soonest, please?

Thank you very, very much.
